Opening Letter...

The ninety-five / ninety-six academic year, for The American University, was, in a sense, the beginning of the millenium's end. Our University's founders intended American to be one of the great national universities. Since 1896, when Bishop Hurst broke ground for Hurst Hall, the university has made considerable leaps toward that goal, and continues improve for the future.

A.U.
Spirit
is back

Not only has the University been steadily building and expanding physically, but also broadening its course curriculum to include subjects taught no where else, such as Global Nuclear Studies.

American is clearly focusing goals for the new millenium.

Unfortunately in the past few years there has been a perceived lull in the amount of pride a student possessed at American. I sense, and I am not alone, that the American Spirit has revived again.

Visual Identity

No more “The” with

October twenty-third the new system of logos used throughout the University was released with mixed response from the student population. The Eagle printed a story and student survey concerning the system. President Ladner presented as a strong and spirited representation of the student body. Although the Mary Graydon survey was not a random student sampling, the poll indicated some discord. The survey asked students questions such as:

“Should we omit the “The” in our name [from] university letterhead, advertisements and other image setting devices?”

“Should we change the official university name?”

“The AU Logotype and Mascot have been redesigned. “Do you like it?”

“Should AU students have had a chance to design these two?”

When the Administration makes these changes “should students, faculty, staff and alumni be consulted?”

While the 310 poll respondents’ answers implicated that the Administration should have handled the redesign differently, the most important part of the system has nothing to do with what the mark, logo, or mascot look like. The system calls for the entire university to adopt the use of the system, and follow the same guidelines. The Visual Identity Program was put together to strengthen the connection of each department to the university.

This “Program” provides marks, mascots, logo-
types, and guides for nearly all publications.

President Ben

We are a “private university with a public mission”

In his first year as president, beginning July '94, Ladner began to raise A.U.'s profile as a “private university with a public mission” and laid the groundwork for strategic planning through the adoption of the university's “Statement of Common Purpose,” which will serve as a touchstone for academic programming, campus life, and facilities development for the coming years.

We must connect the administration, faculty, and the student body by one common identity, back to the university.

He reorganized A.U.'s administrative structure and assembled a new senior leadership team that brought stability to the upper level management for the first time in five years. He and his administration completed a search to fill seven presidential cabinet positions, four of which were filled during a national search. Robert Griffith was appointed to provost, Tom Goodale to vice president of student services; Tom Myers to vice president of enrollment services, and Linda Nelson to vice president for development. Ladner also appointed former director of media relations, David Taylor, to the position of special assistant to the president. Former administrative coordinator in the president's office, Margie Hadsell, was promoted to executive secretary.

1995-6 was President Ladner's second term. At the beginning of the year he was interviewed for the American Scene and said that he planned on continuing his work toward creating a sense of community here at A.U. He feels that the administration, faculty, and student body of the university each have a false identity of their own, and are completely removed from one another. Ladner's first step for change, was to implement a new university wide visual identity system. Though the system was met with some concern from the student body, concerning aspects such as cost and aesthetics, Ladner was willing to discuss the system on various occasions, such as Open Mike Night in the Tavern.

Triples

Triples, dorm rooms occupied by three students, were yet another outcome of American University's increased Freshmen acceptance this year. Freshmen were first questioned on their Residence Preference forms whether or not they would object to boarding with an extra roommate. The more adventurous of souls who accepted the challenge were placed into these triples with others of the same choice. Simple and painless.....usually.

At times, the atmosphere of the room could seem to all but whisper the common proverb "Three is a crowd...". This can only be expected in a situation where people were faced with the task of dividing a space designed to suit two people into space accommodating for three.

One thing about life in a triple is that friendships formed are enduring and impressive in their strength. Being a part of a triple certainly insures that you will always have a lunch date, study partner, or an extra friend to confide in.

Though the mere mention of triples can predictably provoke anything from cringing to sympathy from students who share their room with only one other person, most Freshmen in triples have proved the pessimists wrong. They have adapted to the situation with the true American spirit and figure: If you are going to be an eagle, why not share a little nest room?

In Memory of

“Grandpa, you were a pillar of fire before the camp. And now we’re just the camp left alone in the dark, and we’re so cold. I know people are talking about a national loss, but how can you console a whole nation when Grandma cannot stop weeping.” — Rabin’s 17-year-old granddaughter Noa Ben-Artzi Philosof

Millions mourned the death of a leader, colleague and friend. The assassination of Yitzak Rabin on November 4, 1995, created a shock wave that was felt all around the world. People from all walks of life and every corner of the world stood silent while the bells and sirens of Israel peeled out in memorial to the fallen champion of peace. Political leaders from all over the world attended his funeral and memorial service. Even some of the rulers considered enemies of the peace process, put down their weapons to pay tribute to Former Prime Minister Yitzak Rabin. Tears were shed by even the solemnest of individuals.

In the global aspect, his death was seen as the possible end of the peace process in the Middle East. Many feared that what he had started was never going to get finished.

On the day of the assassination, there was a shroud of sadness that had enveloped the American University campus. The magnitude of this event could be viewed in the eyes of the student body and faculty. So many realized the effects that it could have had on the world.

If you had walked through Anderson 3N the day of the assassination, you would have seen a sign that conveyed a very poignant message. Yuval Levin, a freshman in the School of Public Affairs, always has a picture posted outside his room with a bit of sarcastic political humor beneath it. On the day of the assassination he interrupted his usual political commentary to post a memorial to Yitzak Rabin. It simply consisted of a picture of Prime Minister Yitzak Rabin with 1922-1995 printed beneath the picture with these words placed solemnly below: NO HUMOR TODAY. Those words encompassed the feelings of many of those affected by the assassination. There was no room in the hearts of the mourners for humor for they were filled with grief and sorrow.

One thing that helped much of the AU community to cope was a candlelight vigil held at Kay Spiritual Center.

As the shock settled and the world wondered where this would lead, many began to realize the media images of Israel in the wake of the assassination may have pushed the Middle East closer to the peace that Rabin's extremist Jewish assassin was protesting. This was an thesis presented on November 27, 1995, during the School of Communication's American Forum, "Rabin's Legacy: Press Coverage of Israel and the Middle East." The panel consisted of Khalid Duran, senior fellow at the Institute for International Studies and editor of TransState Islam ; Shlomo Gur, deputy chief of mission at the Embassy of Israel in Washington; Judith Kipper, director of the Middle East Forum for the Council of Foreign Relations and a consultant to the RAND Corp. and ABC News; and Ralph Begleiter, CNN world affairs correspondent-the last non-Israeli journalist to interview Rabin.

District Traffic

The first thing a visitor or newcomer to Washington, D.C.

Whether driving a car, riding a bus, or trying to cross the street, district traffic cannot be avoided. Tensions run high as taxi drivers search for passengers and Metro buses make continuous stops, both ignoring the other cars on the road. Traffic circles do not help the situation. Trying to stay in your lane while out of state drivers figure their way around Dupont Circle can lead to screeching tires, waving fists. Being a pedestrian in Washington means taking your life in your hands at every streetcrossing. Not having the right of way often leaves walkers sprinting across busy intersections dodging cars from all directions. Most people prefer driving their own car, rather than taking public sees is not the Washington Monument or the White House, but cars, lots and lots of cars.

transportation, which adds to the congestion on the streets. Those lucky enough to be driving often wonder why they bother as they are forced to spend twenty minutes in search of that elusive parking spot. Travelling by the Metro system is often the easiest way to get around the city. While travelling by bus can be slow, and the midnight curfew can limit one's schedule, MetroRail is quick, and much cheaper than paying for parking.

The downtown D.C. area sprung to life on September 23rd in the spirit of AIDS awareness. American University students, faculty, and alumni marched among the droves of citizens who made the city resonate with activity. Gathering downtown on the Mall in the early morning, participants came out from the far reaches of the nation to voice their concern and show their support for one of the most publicized health issues of today: the AIDS epidemic.

The walk went into full swing upon the arrival of such political figures as Tipper Gore. From there, the participants proceeded to march through the temporarily closed off streets of D.C., making their presence and cause known. American University groups were not to be overlooked in the crowd. They began at the head of the march, with their banners sailing out in front of them and their cheers heard by all around them.

Foot traffic steadily replaced the usual automotive congestion as onlookers called out words of encouragement to the throngs who surged past. One sure sign that the American spirit was present was the appearance of our own "Condom Man". During the pause before the walk was underway, he was seen passing out condoms and urging his message of safer sex to anyone within earshot.

Thanks to those involved and active in the cause, the walk was a definite success. Though it was only an annual event, the impact that it causes was enough to make any American University student proud enough to proclaim from the frontlines of a just cause, "Once an Eagle, Always an Eagle!".

Delta Chi

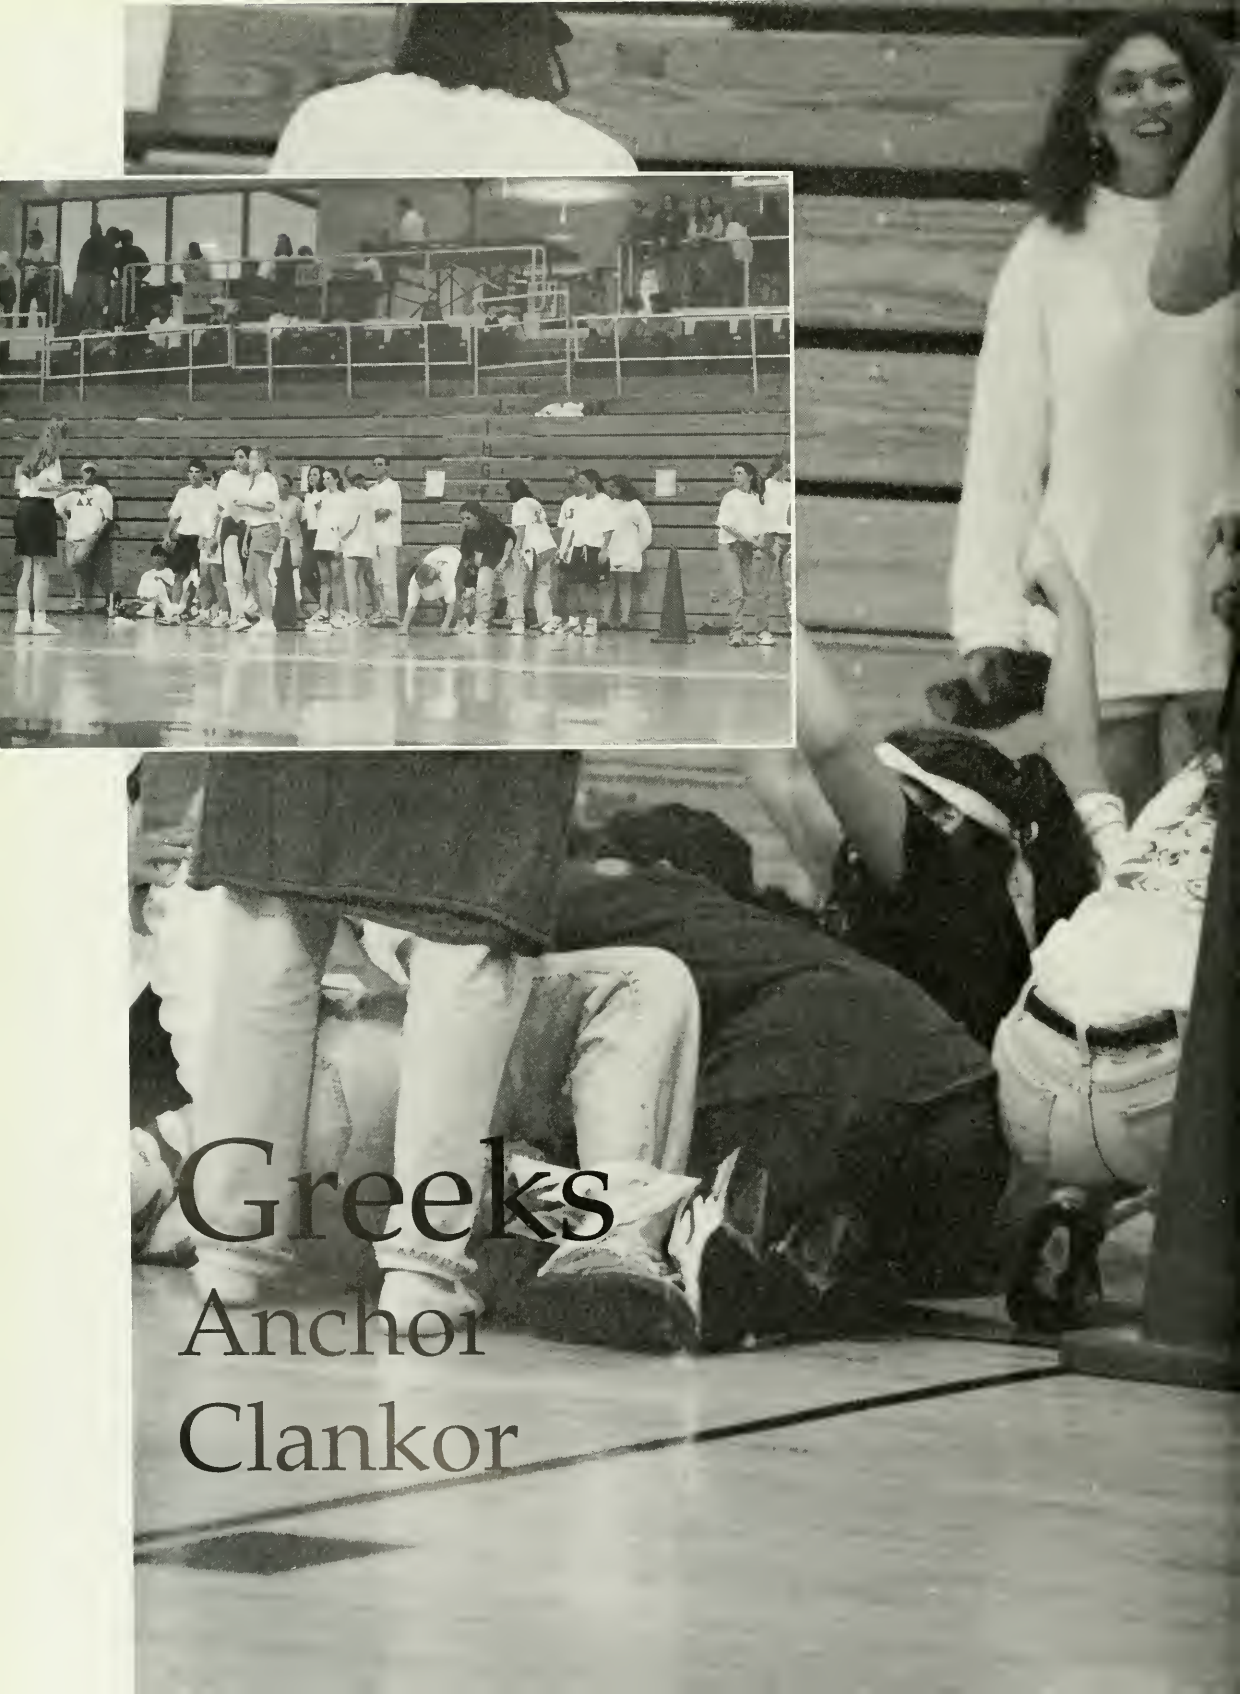

The American Chapter of the Delta Chi Fraternity continued its tradition of campus leadership and involvement throughout the Fall semester of 1995. One of the highlights included the initiation of the Kappa pledge class. Another, was Delta Chi's highly successful philanthropy project. The fraternity sponsored a campus-wide wiffleball tournament held during Greek Weekend in October. Five-person teams could pay to participate in the tournament, held on the Friedheim Quad, with all of the proceeds going to The Luekemia Society of America. Through the combined efforts of the brotherhood, Delta Chi was able to raise well over a thousand dollars for this worthy cause. Also, the fraternity excelled in the field of intramurals. Delta Chi's soccer team made it all the way to the finals, and its flag football team reached the playoffs for the first time in the fraternity's history. Finally, to culminate a highly successful semester, Delta Chi held its fifth year anniversary founder's ball at the Senate's Russell Caucus Ballroom. Delta Chi made great strides throughout the Fall 1995 semester, and it hopes to continue the progress for years to come.

Scott Pearson, Kirk Friedrich, and Stephen Franzke head a squad of talent.

Through the years the American University men's soccer team has consistently been dealt grueling schedules. This year has been no different. Their schedule contained games against eight teams that have been to the NCAA tournament in the past two years. They began their season with the team's first-ever appearance in the eminent Coca-Cola Classic at Virginia and then continued with fifteen games, eight of which were CAA conference games.

The team had to deal with many important vacancies left open by last year's graduates. They lost the majority of their veteran scoring ability and the experience in goal. The Eagles were counting on sophomore Scott Pearson, a second-team All-CAA pick as a freshman last year, to head up the group of talented and dangerous scorers on the team. Through the first half of the season Pearson really came through for the team. Included in his list of contributions would have to be his second collegiate hat trick in their September 30 game against Howard. When the Eagles outshot Maryland 15-13, Scott Pearson made the scoring goal. Kirk Friedrich also returned with veteran experience, and added to his reputation with a goal on nationally ranked William and Mary. Kirk helped keep the team in pace with the Tribe up through most of the game with the goal.

A major concern for coach Jenkins had to be the lack of experience that he was forced to put between the net at the beginning of the season. Freshman goalkeeper, Jeff Angelucci has shown that freshman doesn't mean inexperienced. When the game against Old Dominion University on September 14 was completed, Angelucci had already registered 47 saves on the year.

The problem for the '95 - '96 team has not been getting ahead; it has been staying ahead. Although most of the Limelight usually goes to forwards and goalies, the strongest parts of the team were the midfielders and defenders. In turnovers, by midfielders like Bob Schwartz, Jeff Americo, Kirk Friedrich, Jon Pascale, and Greg Lanza, or the countless turnovers by defensive players like Todd Miller and Stephen Franzke all keep the ball rolling. The strongest aspect of the '95 - '96 men's team was its ability to keep the ball downfield no matter how tough their opponent.

The '95 - '96 women's soccer team has taken advantage of the experience that was gained through last season's 7-10-1 record established against seven nationally-ranked teams. With ten returning starters from last year's team, the Eagles had a firm foundation from which to build the '95 - '96 squad. They were looking to capitalize on that experience through yet another difficult schedule.

All through last year's season, the team started as many as seven freshmen in it's line-up. With only one senior on this year's squad, head coach Colleen Corwell again needed support from the younger members of the squad.

Senior and team captain Eileen MacNeil, who has been chosen as a member of the All-CAA Second Team the past two seasons, was expected to help stabilize the Eagle's defense this season, while junior Julia Pike and sophomores Danielle Pini and Lisa Herndon were seen as the necessary scoring punch for the team to be a force in the CAA. Junior Shannon Davis, who is one of only three returning Eagles to have started every one of last year's eighteen contests was MacNeil's defensive partner.

The Eagles continue to build this year with a large number of freshmen, and a majority of underclassmen. New talent means big improvement for the lady Eagles.

One of the strongest aspects of the team had to be the players between the posts. Although junior goalkeeper Lisa Gervase jumped to the forefront by mid-October leading the CAA with 74 saves, there were always two freshmen standing in wait to back her up, Mari Hyde and Maurcen McCulloch. Through the combination of these three outstanding goalies the team tallied up five shut-outs in the first half of the season.

Led by Lisa Herndon in scoring, Lisa Gervase in goal and Eileen MacNeil on defense, the team was guaranteed improvement from the previous season.

The greatest understatement possible at the beginning of this year, would have had to have been that the hopes for the American University field hockey team were high. The Eagles were looking to soar even higher after finishing last year's season ranked 15th in the nation in this year's competition. The return of AU's most-prolific scorer in school history, Stacey-Ann Sui Butt, and an influx of several top-notch international players gave the Eagles a good start in that direction. It also benefitted the team maintained nine of last year's starters and 80 percent of their scoring output.

Volleyball

This year had to be a difficult year for the women's volleyball team. Coming off its best season in AU's history, they had some unfinished business to take care of this year. Even though they completed last year's season with a 34-8 record, had a 23 game winning streak and were the first team in our school's history to represent AU in the National Invitational Volleyball Championships, Coach Goldberg's biggest challenges were left to be accomplished during the '95 season.

At the beginning of the season Goldberg was counting on his four returning players; Francine Courtat, Sherita Hall, Jennifer Conner, and Shannon Jaax; to really take control of the team. However, a serious back problem placed a kink in his plans for the team. As of mid-season Sherita Hall had just begun physical therapy and it looked doubtful that she would play at all this season.

Stepping to the foreground to fill the void left by this unfortunate injury was Vendula Kurcova. She is a six foot freshman from the Czech Republic. Over the season she proved herself worthy of the starting position into which she was thrust. However, on the evening of October 21, 1995, the Eagles suffered another temporary set-back when Vendula blew out her knee during their home match versus Virginia Tech.

This year's team was very versatile the entire season. They worked together and helped to fill the gaps when and where players were absent.

Placing eighth at Conferences might not seem like a mighty finish, but for a small team with a smaller budget, the individual finishes are more notable than the overall team standing.

Field Hockey

In the CAA semifinals AU falls to the ODU Monarchs in overtime. The Eagles finished the season 13-5, 4-2 CAA, compared to 7-10-2 just two seasons ago. AU has really stepped up its play with international players like Siu-Butt, Virginia Casabo, and Julia Behr.

The 1995 season was the final season for quite a few Eagles on the Field Hockey team, Stacey Stets, Kelly Crossman, Kristen Frieswyk, and Veronica Grigera. In their freshmen years they were "on the brink of the big games... entering overtime strong, and leaving losing," comments captain Kelly Crossman, now they have turned itself into a nationally ranked team.

Soccer

Men

For the first time in six years, men's soccer advanced to the semi-finals where they were defeated by nationally ranked William and Mary. In the course of the CAA tournament, AU defeated Old Dominion. During the 1994-1995 season, American was defeated by ODU during first round competition. American finished its regular season (5-3 CAA) with wins against both UNCW and ECU. Coach Bob Jenkins was very pleased with the way the team was looking before the conference tournament, and pointed out the depth on the bench. Players like junior Jon Pascale, who scored both second half goals, really add a lot of depth to the Eagles line-up.

Women

Congratulations to the women's soccer team, due to a much improved season, and to CAA coach of the year Colleen Corwell, first team All-CAA picks Lisa Herndon and Lisa Gervase, as well as second team picks Danielle Pini and Carrie Schroeder. The team finished up their regular season play 10-7-4, and 3-3-2 CAA.

Volleyball

The Eagles finish the their season successfully despite setbacks from injuries. After advancing to the semifinals, AU players recieved several awards. Shirley Smickel recieves CAA rookie of the year, First Team All-CAA Francine Courtat, Second Team All-CAA Shirley Smickel and Vendula Kurcova. The 1995 season became the seventh consecutive season in which the Eagles won at least 20 wins, giving an overall 178-77 record since coach Barry Goldberg began at AU.

Swimming and Diving

Introducing Mark Daven, the newly appointed head swimming coach. Coach Daven brings with him a sincere love for the sport, a hard working attitude, and a team oriented attitude. Daven, who has compiled an impressive coaching résumé including assistant with a UCLA NCAA championship team, possesses the winning attitude that could inspire any team toward greatness. Daven is persistent with stroke technique, and uses video to show swimmers racing strategies and their current stroke technique to compare to how they should be.

AU men's swim team is probably one of the most talented varsity teams here at AU. We have been undefeated for more than a year and a half, almost two years and I think that is a record that no other teams have equalled here at AU.— co-captain Niels Jensen.

Special thanks to Jeff Akseizer of ATV for the use of his HI-8 recorder.

With the search of a new athletic director well under way, major changes have already taken place, but will likely be mild compared to what a new Athletic Director will offer.

Selected in early March, Dr. Lee A. McElroy started his new A.D. position on May 1.

Dreams of what a new director will bring: finished track, improved bleachers, higher attendances, more press coverage, improved school image, higher attendance, school spirit, increased alumni contributions, Dreams.

There have been many changes on campus from triple rooms to a renovated Anderson Hall and Mary Graydon Center. However, one of the more subtle changes that has occurred is in the University Computing Center. I sat down with Malek Malaikah, director of UCC, to talk about some of these changes.

One was, "a disadvantage of speed. Modems are not as quick as a LAN card." This is due to the fact that a Lan card acts as a direct connection to the network. A modem, which uses a phone line, tends to be slower. However, the UCC spent time working on a solution to this problem. This was their main goal, for a while. They wanted to ensure that all students and faculty could have access to the EagleNet to use things like word-processing software and e-mail from almost any location.

Use of Eaglenet and university labs has increased dramatically over the years as Media coverage of the World Wide Web increased. The value of the internet, as an information source and communications medium, to students, administration, and faculty, has been realized by the university.

Pictured opposite, The Friedheim lab offers use of its NeXT machines to its Communications students. There are multiple specialty labs on campus in addition to the labs for general use.

Roger Streitmatter teacher of the year

Every year one professor is recognized for their outstanding achievements and dedication to their students. For the 1995-1996 term, Professor Roger Streitmatter received this honorable distinction. Dr. Streitmatter is a journalist and historian who has been a member of the School of Communications faculty for over fifteen years. He has received two Fulbright Fellowships to teach American Journalism in Moscow at Moscow State University and at the International Studies University of Shanghai, China.

Professor Streitmatter learned of being named as Scholar/Teacher of the Year while he was still teaching in Shanghai in the Fall of 1994. He said he began to appreciate then, during a discussion with one of his Chinese students on American-style teaching, the unique qualities of it. He said that American professors personalize teaching while Chinese teachers simply pontificate—“American professors are interested in what students think.”

Streitmatter continued, “I have continued to think about teaching as a personal process. [The] bedrock principle of high quality teaching [is that] a teacher tells students what he or she expects of them and pushes them to reach that standard. A master teacher, on the other hand, awakens a student’s own expectations.”

“I must reveal my own gaps of knowledge, my own uncertainties, my own unanswered questions. To show the students that I... in short, am human.” — Roger Streitmatter

Faculty

On the following pages are portraits of some of the University's faculty and administration. The Talon would like to make this section more complete in the future. Administration and Faculty are encouraged to express their interest in portraits. Please call 885-1420, or write to The Talon 228 MGC.

A special thanks to the faculty members pictured; without you, this section would not be possible.

Kimonos
turn Tracks head over heels,

January 27, at the Tracks club, the Polyester Liberation Organization debuted "Trash'n Vaudville Style". PLO shows have become notable for outrageous fashions and exaggerated play acting. At Tracks PLO put on three fifteen minute performances of theatrics and dancing. One show, featured on the later page spread, themed unconventionally fabricated Japanese Kimonos representing several decades.

A fifties Kimono made of a red and white checked table cloth. A sixties Kimono was a brightly colored pattern of flowers. Music as varied as Swing and Duran Duran's "Rio" accented the Kimonos. The shows served as a fundraiser for a performance in New York in which PLO would perform with other groups in a fashion extravaganza.

Backstage

Behind the scenes of Fashion

Sometimes the best moments of a theatric production don't happen on the stage. Opening night brings out the frustration and anxiety in all involved, but also some of funniest, cutest and most touching moments that the cast and crew share. But as mere audience viewers, we never get a backstage look at what happens before those curtains rise. So let us take this chance to go behind the scenes of this year's AU players production of Fashion.

How To Annoy Your Professor—by an unknown user, received via e-mail. Please send us your mail, send to TAI.ON@american.edu

- Brush your teeth during class. While doing so, raise your hand as if you have a question, and mumble your question incoherently while brushing, spewing toothpaste all over the place.

If your professor objects to your actions, go on a tirade about proper oral hygiene.

- Sit way at the back of the room, up against the wall, to get as far away from your professor as possible. While he/she is lecturing, shout out things like, "What?" and "Speak up! You're mumbling!"

If your professor advises you to sit closer to the front, tell him/her you can't because you're scouting the room for "assassins."

- If you have an early morning class, get there before anyone else, and bring a pillow, some blankets, an air mattress, and an alarm clock. Wear your pajamas. Lie down on the air mattress with the pillow and the blankets and act like you're asleep. Have the alarm set for about two minutes into class. When it goes off, preferably loudly, hit the "snore" button and go back to sleep. Keep doing so for the duration of the class.

- Dispute everything your professor says, no matter how simple. Try to get him/her to "prove" everything to you. Rant and rave about what a big liar your professor is. Yell at students who are taking notes, saying, "Stop writing down all these lies!"

- Show up to class about ten minutes late. Rule into the room on a bicycle, yell, "Look out!," and crash into the blackboard. Get up, take a seat, and act like nothing happened. Do this every day.

- Keep "accidentally" setting fires at your desk. Burn notebooks, papers, or whatever you have handy. Whenever you start a fire, no matter how small it is, start yelling, "Fire! Fire!" and run out of the room in a panic. Don't return for the rest of class.

- Hide somewhere inside the classroom. Wait for your professor to take attendance. Don't come out when he/she calls your name. Halfway through class, pump out and yell, "Just kidding! I'm here! Fooled you again!" Sit down and be quiet for the rest of class.

- Wrap yourself in bandages and come to class in a wheelchair. Throughout class, cry a lot and moan things like, "Why me?" and

- "Please kill me!" Get up during class, like you're going to meekly stroll walking. Instead, fall down, cry out in pain, and wait for someone to help you bac sighing heavily and giving it evil looks when it fails to "speak." When you leave the room after class, start yelling at the cactus, "I can't believe you embarrassed me AGAIN..."

- When your professor gives you a syllabus, take it home, correct it, give it a grade, and return it to the professor. Demand extra credit.
- Come to class every day wearing scary Halloween masks. Try to get your professor to guess who you are. Shoot him/her with a water pistol, scream, and run around the room knocking things over. Say, "Pretty scary, huh?"

- Get the whole class to show up a few minutes early, and throw a surprise party for your professor. Insist that you can't start class until he/she the time when class is supposed to begin. Tie the note to a rock, and throw it through the window.

• Write down everything that your professor says, word for word. Think up a melody and turn the words into a song. Bring a guitar to class and perform the song for the class. Explain to your professor that he/she is "very inspiring."

• Get a monkey and bring it to class with you. Tell your professor that you've hired the monkey to take notes for you. Sit back and relax during class, letting the monkey scribble on a piece of paper. When it comes time to write a paper or take a test, write down things like, "I wish I had a banana" and "I miss my tire swing." Assuming you get a bad grade, angrily fire the monkey in front of your professor, people in the class to start speaking the fake language too, and have frequent discussions during class. Act like you're really interested in what you're discussing. If your professor tries to interrupt or stop you, act annoyed and motion for him/her to quiet down. *

As Life progresses, it seems so easy for brothers to drift from each other. But our relationship has proved too strong and I believe we will always be the best of friends, even when I am in my most annoying state. I am very proud and not very surprised of who you have grown into. Thankyou for everything, for you have given me a lot. Love, Scott

We met in class neither of us wanted to take. When you first smiled at me, I knew I wanted to know more. When you held my hand, I knew I was in love and there was no turning back. From that day on, we have had so much fun together. With each day that passes, I love you more and more!
Love Always,
Crissy

Danny

Wow! The last four years have gone by so fast. You never cease to amaze us; with each year you grow more handsome, inquisitive and loving. The time we spend together is treasured dearly. You seem to be welcoming responsibility, which makes us very proud. You're a great friend and confidant to your brother and truly a friend to everyone you love.

You have also made us happy by announcing your engagement to Crissy. We love and cherish the two of you. So, we toast to your happiness and success. You are more than a son, You are also a wonderful friend.

There is no such thing as a 9 to 5 emergency.

Accidents and illness can happen at any time of the day or night. And when they do, every minute counts.

That's why Sibley's emergency service is open 24 hours-a-day, every day. We are staffed around the clock with physicians and nurses who are trained to handle emergencies. And we're easy to get to...just minutes away.

Emergency services at Sibley Memorial Hospital. 24 hours-a-day, every day. Because emergencies don't keep regular hours.
